Forecast For Northwest England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1600 on Thursday 09 Sep 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Heavy showers easing through the evening but remaining possible overnight.

This Evening and Tonight:
The widespread daytime showers, and associated storms, will begin easing through the evening and largely clear by midnight. The odd scattered shower, heavy at times and possibly thundery, remains possible through the early hours, however. Feeling warm and muggy. Minimum temperature 15 deg C (59 deg F).

Friday:
A cloudy start for all, with widespread showery rain. Cloud breaks into the afternoon to allow for brighter skies, but also scattered, possibly heavy and thundery showers to break out. Maximum temperature 21 deg C (70 deg F).

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
Likely a cloudy start to Saturday, this clearing to a generally dry and bright weekend and Monday, though the odd light shower remains possible. Temperatures returning to nearer average.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.